

HELLOFRESH IS AT THE NATURAL HISTORY MUSEUM TO BRING BACK DINNERTIME TO FAMILIES THIS SUMMER

An immersive, interactive installation called 'The Curious Kitchen' will invite families to discover how dinner gets to the table

- Families can explore an immersive farm environment inside the Natural History Museum, harvesting ingredients and uncovering the stories of where they come from
- An interactive table will guide families through cooking a recipe together - one ingredient at a time - revealing how dinner comes together
- Fully accessible and free to visit, the experience runs from 27 July to 30 August 2026

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE, LONDON: HelloFresh, the world's leading meal kit company*, is at the Natural History Museum this summer with a hands-on family experience that reconnects people with where their food actually comes from.

Set within an immersive farm installation at the UK's most visited attraction, families can choose from a selection of HelloFresh recipes, harvest ingredients from across the farm environment, and gather together at an interactive table that reveals the story behind every ingredient - from the field it grew in, to the fork it ends up on.

Titled The Curious Kitchen, the experience is free to enter and runs from 27 July to 30 August during the school holidays. The experience sits alongside the Natural History Museum's wider summer programme - making it the perfect reason to spend a day in the heart of London.

The installation is fully wheelchair and pushchair accessible, with audio narration and pictogram signage.

Philip Doran, CEO of HelloFresh UK & Ireland said: "At HelloFresh, we believe that understanding where our food comes from is just as important as what's on the plate. With this experience, we wanted to create something genuinely hands-on where families can connect with the journey of their food together. Bringing this experience to the Natural History Museum felt like the perfect fit, giving us the chance to bring dinnertime to life in one of the most inspiring settings in the country, and to help spark a lifelong curiosity about food in the next generation."

Adam Farrar, Director of Commercial and Visitor Experience at the Natural History Museum said: "We're delighted to welcome HelloFresh to the Museum this summer with The Curious Kitchen. Their free and inspiring installation explores where food comes from and celebrates the importance of family mealtimes, offering visitors a hands-on way to experience the Museum, create lasting memories, and make the most of their summer holiday visit, while supporting the Museum's mission to create advocates for the planet."

About Natural History Museum

The Natural History Museum is a world-leading scientific research centre and the UK's number one visitor attraction.

We are welcoming more than 7 million people to our blockbuster exhibitions, galleries and gardens and our 350 scientists are finding solutions to the planetary emergency - from reversing biodiversity loss to resourcing the green economy.

With over 80 million specimens, spanning 4.5 billion years, the breadth and depth of the Museum's collection make it the most important of its kind in the world.

Through our NHM150 campaign, we are raising an additional £150 million to transform our iconic building and meet our mission of creating over 100 million advocates for the planet by 2031 – the Museum's 150th anniversary.
